Windows RTL8201/RTL8201/CL.Q: Number of possible ways to cut a square into 4 equal parts: How many ways are there to cut a 2×2 square into 4 equal parts? My try: Assume ABCD is the square where A stands for the parts which can't be cut further. Now, the corresponding square to ABCD is ADCBA. Thus, the square can be cut in $\binom{4}{2}=6$ ways. My confusion: There are 5 ways to cut this square into 4 equal parts. One of them is as follows: Now, I don't understand that to how one can cut the square into 4 equal parts this way. I know ABCD can be cut into 4 equal parts since we have 5 ways of cutting the middle part, thus we have 4 ways of cutting the remaining 3 parts. But why the given solution says there are 5 ways? A: This is a case of overcounting. The solution counts the ways we get any one square, multiply it by the number of ways we get a particular arrangement of 4 squares. So the solution counts this way: 1) Choose the first square. There are 5 possible ways to choose this square (any of the 5 squares). 2) Choose any of the remaining 4 squares. There are $\binom{4}{2}=6$ ways to choose this square. 3) Reuse the second square as the first square. There are 5 possible ways to choose this
